LUBNA CHARYA

About my paintings: I hate academy but love learning from nature, children, tittle-tattles and all non beneficial acts. My paintings are very much like poems. They have something to say. Something to share with the world about beloved pain and painful love.

I had never gone to any art institute. Painting is my passion, my way to describe, maybe to express myself. In the paintings I have something to say, something to share with the viewer. This is not only for beautification of art or some definition of art. This is the visual form of my thoughts, little imaginative wings of life in every moment, like some one drops in the morning or gives of fireflies at night. I want to share those which I notice from someone in my personal life or may not be. It is a kind of diary writing, some aphorism, notes, some incidents about someone or some nature, fun, problems etc. Some say it is philosophical. I myself call it poetic. These, they are like a poem. The way how a poem become finished, my paintings have the same tendency to go there. Because time and has used acrylic colors. And the composition style, color treatment is very much as my own. Each of my paintings has a story, story from my life, experience, thoughts. Most of the time the characters of my paintings is me, myself.

I was born in Khulna. I write poems also. I have been poetry book named 'Sleeping in a room', 'Chrysalis', 'Violet', 'Lullaby' and 'Pigeon' published by Muktam and Ananta. I had received 'Chrysalis' award in contemporary bangla in 2005. Now I'm living in dhaka and working as a copy writer.
